FRONT COVER: Adapted from the book cover for The End of Tennessee by Rachel M. Hanson, designed by Amanda Weiss. ABOVE: George and Laura Elmore with children Naomi Elmore and Cresswell Elmore on Easter Sunday, ca. 1940. Courtesy of the Elmore family. Featured in The Cost of the Vote by Carolyn Click.
“Not a year before I ran away from home at seventeen, I stepped out of the house at dusk, still able to see shrub oaks thinned out for winter, fame flower, too, and dun clay so wet the smell of it seemed settled in my skin.” So begins Rachel M. Hanson’s debut memoir about growing up impoverished, uneducated, and surrounded by violence. In lyrical, fragmented prose, she lays bare the impossible choice between self-preservation and her love for five younger siblings for whom she had become a second mother. As the years pass, Hanson struggles with guilt for leaving her siblings as she slowly realizes she could not save them. The End of Tennessee is a testament to a sister’s love, resilience, and determination, a book for anyone who has left one life to create another.

The End of Tennessee
A Memoir
RACHEL M. HANSON

A haunting memoir of childhood trauma, building a life, and living with wounds that never heal.

RACHEL M. HANSON’s writing has appeared in literary journals, including Creative Nonfiction, The Iowa Review, and Joyland Magazine. She is assistant professor of English at the University of North Carolina Asheville.

A gut-wrenching story of resilience and survival, beautifully anchored through the ferocity of Hanson’s attachments to those she loves. Gorgeous, terrifying, impossible to put down.”

—TESSA FONTAINE, AUTHOR OF THE RED GROVE
When George Elmore requested a ballot to vote in the 1946 South Carolina Democratic Party primary, he was turned away. While the general election would not occur until November, everyone in South Carolina understood that the results of the election would really be decided at the primary. South Carolina was a one-party state, and the segregationist Democratic Party had endured as the uncontested rulers of state politics since the end of political Reconstruction in the late 1870s.

Carolyn Click’s The Cost of the Vote centers around Elmore and the activists and lawyers who successfully challenged the all-white primary in South Carolina. Although Elmore’s court challenge would prove successful, he paid a steep personal price. He died a decade after the case, ruined financially, and his family was scattered because of the hostility provoked by his activism. The political rewards for Black voters also remained long in coming, and Elmore would not survive to see the full flowering of the 1960s voting rights movement.

Click tells the story of a man who believed, with uncommon boldness, that he and other Black Americans were guaranteed the right to vote.

One man’s fight for the ballot reveals the sacrifices of those who shaped the civil rights movement in the American South.
On August 13, 1946, George Elmore arrived at his regular polling place in Columbia, South Carolina. No Black man or woman had cast a meaningful ballot in South Carolina since the 1870s. For Elmore and others in the state, the day had come to reclaim this most precious American right.

CAROLYN CLICK is a long-time journalist and teacher. She was the Virginia editor for United Press International and a reporter at the Roanoke Times & World-News and The State. Click teaches at the University of South Carolina School of Journalism and Mass Communications and in the university's Honors College.

South of My Dreams
Finding My American Home,
A Memoir
F. K. CLEMENTI

South of My Dreams follows the adventures and misadventures of Fania, a quixotic heroine, who dreamed all her life of making it big in New York City. Growing up in 1970s Italy, Fania felt constrained by a stale bourgeois ambiance, corrupt society, and national culture hostile to women’s independence. In pursuit of her childhood fantasy, and heavily influenced by Hollywood films, she leaves everything behind and comes to the United States, where she thinks her American Dream awaits. Instead, her American nightmare begins. From miraculous breakthroughs to tragic setbacks, Fania’s path is marked by an irreparable trauma while also being graced by intense love, faithful friendships, and inspiring mentors.

Through dramatic twists and turns—and to her great amazement—Fania learns the true meaning of the expression to “go south.”

Simultaneously merciless and humorous, Clementi offers what is ultimately an inspiring account of a woman’s disillusionment and personal rebirth. Entertaining, original, and poetic, South of My Dreams will resonate with all who fight hard for what they want and refuse to put aside their childhood dreams.

Woman plans, God laughs . . .
Woman persists.

F. K. CLEMENTI is a writer, public intellectual, and a professor of English and Jewish Studies at the University of South Carolina. She is the author of Holocaust Mothers and Daughters: Family, History, and Trauma.
Arlington, Virginia, sits on the bank of the Potomac River, just opposite the nation’s capital city of Washington, DC. This proximity shaped the history of Arlington and the economic, social, and political lives of its Black residents. In Built by the People Themselves, Lindsey Bestebreurtje traces the history of Arlington’s Black community from the first days of emancipation through the era of civil rights in the twentieth century. She highlights individual stories of how Black families, neighborhoods, institutions, and communities were affected by politics, planning, and policy at the county and state levels. A core insight of Bestebreurtje’s account is how common people developed strategies to survive and thrive despite systems of oppression in the Jim Crow South. Moving beyond the standard story of suburbanization that focuses on elite white community developers, Bestebreurtje analyzes African American–led community development and its effects on Arlington County.

LINDSEY BESTEBREURTJE has served as a curatorial assistant with the Smithsonian’s National Museum of African American History and Culture since 2015. Her publications have appeared in The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography and Reviews in History.

AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES/Civil Rights
Mary Turner and the Mob
The Brooks-Lowndes Race Riot of 1918 in History and Memory

THOMAS AIELLO

A reinterpretation of one of America’s most notorious lynchings

The 1918 lynching of Mary Turner by a white mob in Brooks County, Georgia, is remembered and studied mainly because of the horror of an allegedly pregnant woman’s murder. In Mary and the Mob, author Thomas Aiello asserts that the gruesome details of Turner’s execution have distracted historians from investigating the larger context of these terrible events. Turner was murdered but not pregnant, the author contends, and Walter White, the NAACP investigator in the case, knew this but obscured the facts because of the story’s effectiveness. Aiello approaches Turner’s murder and broader Brooks County violence not only as a series of rural South lynchings but also as events more accurately characterized as race rioting, fitting just inside the broader Red Summer wave starting with East St. Louis in 1917 and continuing until Tulsa in 1921. Mary and the Mob challenges readers to ask the critical questions necessary to understand why South Georgia was an especially violent place in the early 20th century.

THOMAS AIELLO is Professor of History at Valdosta State University and specializes in African American history.

How Reconstruction-era political battles reflected global struggles over the era’s core ideals

Exporting Reconstruction examines Ulysses S. Grant’s Reconstruction-era policy, both foreign and domestic, as an integrated whole. Grant’s vision for America’s international role in the aftermath of the Civil War was best articulated in his 1869 memorandum, considering whether the United States should annex the Dominican Republic. Grant envisioned a combined domestic and foreign policy of Reconstruction, one predicated on spreading the values of liberty, equality, and the rights of citizenship to not only the Dominican Republic but also other Caribbean nations as well as to Native Americans and Chinese immigrants living in the United States but seen as aliens within the nation.

Author Ryan P. Semmes interprets the Grant-era policy of Reconstruction as an all-encompassing agenda that imagined the United States as the arbiter of civil rights for the Western Hemisphere. Exporting Reconstruction shows readers that, unlike presidents before and after his administration, Grant hoped to increase not only the United States’s imperial reach but also extend freedom and liberty to people beyond the borders of North America.

RYAN P. SEMMES is professor and director of research at the Ulysses S. Grant Presidential Library, housed at Mississippi State University.

William S. Walker never knew his uncle, Fletcher “Bud” Blanton. Blanton had been killed fighting in Europe during World War II before Walker was born. Walker had heard stories about Bud, but for most of his life his uncle had existed only as a faded memory. That changed when Walker opened a dusty cabinet forgotten in his garage attic and found a paper sack and a note in his father’s handwriting that read, “Go through before you throw away.” The bag was filled with family photos, correspondence, and a collection of letters and postcards that his uncle Bud had written to his family during his time on the frontline as a US Army infantryman in Europe. The first letter he pulled from the bag opened with the line, “Dearest Mama.” Walker’s Dearest Mama is Bud Blanton’s story. More than that, it is a deeply personal family chronicle that resonates for all those left behind when servicemembers do not return home from combat.

WILLIAM S. WALKER is a South Carolina–born writer and former soldier who worked as a reporter and editor for more than four decades.
Eight stories about extraordinary action carried out by ordinary people

When you want to create positive change against structural and systemic problems, where do you begin? In Peace by Peace Lisa Silvestri uses interview-based storytelling to explore the catalytic moments that led ordinary people to address social, political, and economic issues in their communities ranging from the West Bank to West Baltimore. The source of their audacity is practical wisdom, an Ancient Greek virtue that Silvestri revives for twenty-first century application.

In the face of challenges like environmental exploitation, global conflict, and ongoing fights for social justice, Peace by Peace offers deeply informed insight into how we can move past debilitating cynicism to create actionable change.

LISA ELLEN SILVESTRI is the author of Friended at the Front: Social Media in the American Warzone and coeditor of The Western Journal of Communication. She has spoken at the SXSW Festival and the 92nd Street Y. She teaches at Pennsylvania State University.

ACTIVISM & SOCIAL JUSTICE
How presidential metaphors have shaped US discourse on the Persian Gulf

From the 1970s to the 1990s American presidents and their advisers introduced four metaphors into foreign-policy discourse that taught Americans to view the Persian Gulf as a vulnerable region and site of US responsibility on the world stage. In Securing the Prize: Presidential Metaphor and US Intervention in the Persian Gulf, Randall Fowler argues that, for half a century, metaphor has been central to defining America’s role in the Middle East. Metaphors served as shorthand for presidents to promote their policies, filtering through the judgments of officials, journalists, experts, and critics to mediate American perceptions of the Gulf War. Tracing the use of security metaphors from President Richard Nixon to President George W. Bush, Fowler revises mainstream understandings regarding the origins of the War on Terror and explains the disconnect between skeptical public attitudes toward US involvement in the Gulf War and the heavy American military footprint in the region.

RANDALL FOWLER is assistant professor of communication at Abilene Christian University. A former Fulbright scholar, he is author of More Than a Doctrine: The Eisenhower Era in the Middle East and coauthor of Something to Fear: FDR and the Foundations of American Insecurity, 1912–1945.

How do we tell twenty-first-century war stories when the wars seem to go on forever?

In the post-2011 surge of war stories published in America and Iraq, the defining characteristic is the depiction of combat violence that crosses borders, overtakes civilian spaces, and disrupts chronology. In The War Comes with You: Enduring War in Life, Fiction, and Fantasy, Stacey Peebles picks up where her groundbreaking first book, Welcome to the Suck: Narrating the American Soldier’s Experience in Iraq, left off. Via careful readings of fiction, memoir, and poetry by writers such as Ben Fountain, Siobhan Fallon, Brian Turner, and Hassan Blasim, as well as recent superhero and Star Wars films, Peebles argues that, in the face of real and fantasy “forever wars,” things fall apart. Language, identities, bodies, and even the stories themselves fragment. These narratives suggest that people need not accept incoherence and there is a range of meaningful responses to the experience of everywhere, all-the-time war. Peebles illustrates what to do, that is, when war comes with you.

STACEY PEEBLES is H. W. Stodghill, Jr. and Adele H. Stodghill Professor of English and Film Studies at Centre College. She is the author of Welcome to the Suck and Cormac McCarthy and Performance, as well as editor of the Cormac McCarthy Journal.

The first comprehensive study of the two-time Pulitzer-winning playwright

Lynn Nottage is one of the leading innovators in American theater today. In settings ranging from seventeenth-century France (Las Meninas) to twenty-first century conflicts in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (Ruined) and at a Pennsylvania factory (Sweat), she creatively foregrounds explorations of race, gender, and class.

In Understanding Lynn Nottage, Jennifer L. Hayes presents an accessible overview of Nottage’s body of work to date, connecting her to other Black female playwrights and situating her in the African American literary tradition. In this character-driven study, Hayes examines how the playwright’s dynamic narratives bring together diverse perspectives to address historical and contemporary issues.

This book lays essential groundwork for future study of Nottage, who will continue to be a central dramatic voice for years to come, examining social problems through complex portraits of communities struggling to balance their values with shifting societal norms.

JENNIFER L. HAYES is associate professor of literature at Tennessee State University. She is the author of Teaching African American Literature through Experiential Praxis: African American Writers in Europe.

“Thomas has an approachable style that makes Struggling to Learn an engaging read.”
— JOURNAL OF SOUTHERN HISTORY

The battle for equality in education during the civil rights era came at a cost to Black Americans on the frontlines. In 1964, when fourteen-year-old June Manning Thomas walked into Orangeburg High School as one of thirteen Black students selected to integrate the all-White school, her classmates mocked, shunned, and yelled racial epithets at her. The trauma she experienced made her wonder if the slow-moving progress was worth the emotional sacrifice. In Struggling to Learn Thomas revisits her life growing up in the midst of the civil rights movement before, during, and after desegregation and offers an intimate look at what she and other members of her community endured as they worked to achieve equality for Black students in K-12 schools and higher education.

JUNE MANNING THOMAS is the Mary Frances Berry Distinguished University Professor Emerita of Urban Planning at the University of Michigan.

Shall We Play That One Together?
The Life and Art of Jazz Piano Legend Marian McPartland, With a New Preface
PAUL DE BARROS

Throughout, McPartland’s openness and de Barros’s careful writing create a holistic portrait of one of this century’s most important jazz pianists.
—DOWN BEAT

The life of the unparalleled purveyor of the Great American Songbook, Marian McPartland, is celebrated in this engrossing biography

From Bobby Short to Esperanza Spalding, across the 33-year run of the acclaimed radio show Piano Jazz, Marian McPartland conversed and played piano duets with jazz greats and, via National Public Radio syndication, brought the best of jazz standards to listeners. In Shall We Play That One Together?, Paul de Barros considers McPartland’s full life and shows her to have been a courageous compositional innovator as well as an immensely talented popularizer and educator. Her standing among jazz artists and her advocacy for women jazz musicians made McPartland a natural to host Piano Jazz, conceived in 1978, and first broadcast on WLTR out of Columbia, South Carolina, in 1979. That show secured her reputation in the musical form and allowed her to introduce American and then global audiences to a diverse array of musicians developing the Great American Songbook.
